An important provision of the law is the yes-no voting system, with the ballot question, “Do you approve of the draft constitution? Yes or No?” The draft constitution will be ratified if a majority of the voters in Iraq approve and if two-thirds of the voters in three or more governorates do not reject it.
- Sunni Arab members of the Constitution Drafting Committee rejoined the constitution-drafting process in full on July 26, after the Iraqi Transitional Government (ITG) took steps to ensure their safety.

[2.0] Support a Free and Democratic Iraq – Developments

Transitional National Assembly (TNA) Update:

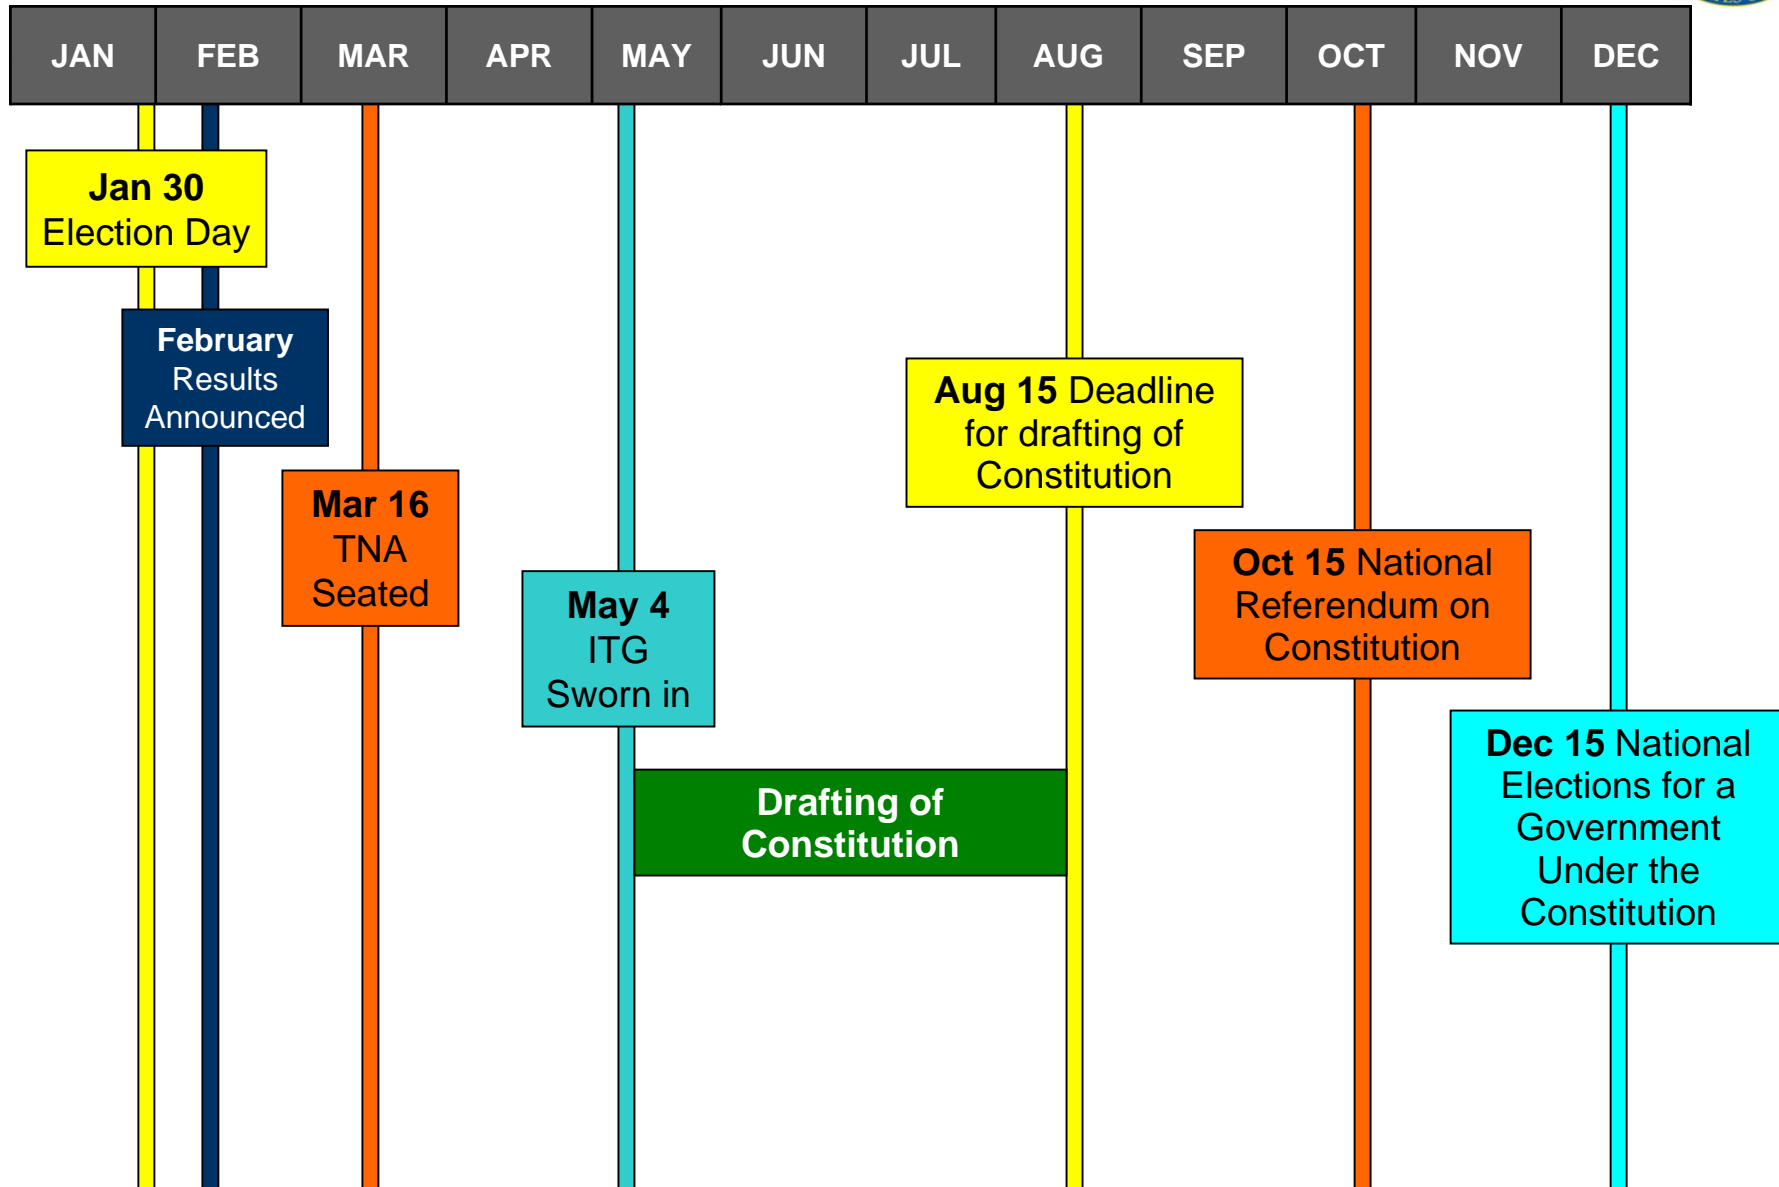

- USAID provided training to 42 TNA members on the legislative drafting process. Training topics included creating and introducing a bill, its reading stages, the supporting role played by the legal staff, the form and content of a law, legislative reviews; the role and use of amendments, and reasons why public input is important to the overall legislative process.
- USAID also provided training to 37 TNA members on advocacy and lobbying for legislators working in a democratic system. USAID civil society representatives led discussions examining advocacy and lobbying at the family, community, regional, national, and international level—but more specifically at the governmental level. Discussions focused on ways advocacy campaigns work, who they involve, and methods that may be used to achieve specific results.

Continuing TNA Responsibilities:

- Serve as Iraq's national legislature until the election of a new government under a permanent constitution.
- According to the Transitional Administrative Law, the TNA is to draft Iraq's new Constitution by August 15, 2005; this will be presented to the Iraqi people for their approval in a national referendum by October 15, 2005.
- If it is approved, an election for a permanent Iraqi government under that new Constitution will occur by the end of 2005.
